

AIRBORNE EARLY WARNING AND CONTROL

No 42 Wing

No 42 Wing was a WWII radar Wing that controlled radar units in Australia and overseas. With a wedgetail eagle in full flight and the words “Defend from Above”, the new motto and crest of RAAF Base Williamtown’s No. 42 Wing was launched in time for the reformation of the Wing on January 2006. The decision to reform No. 42 Wing is in line with Chief of Air Force Air Marshal Geoff Shepherd’s vision for the Wedgetail Airborne Early Warning and Control (AEW and C) capability for the Air Force. No. 42 Wing will deliver AEW and C capability in independent air operations and enable and support operations in the maritime and land environments.
